'Paddy O'Sax' performs for the residents of the Slate Valley Center on March 7.

'Paddy O'Sax' brings good luck sax music to Slate Valley Center

He comes to local skilled nursing facilities as an old-time baseball player, then dressed for the Fourth of July as Uncle Sam O'Phone and as Sax O'Claud during the holiday season.

Now, Luke McNamee of Troy, New York, is back again as "Paddy O'Sax" for St. Patrick's Day, and the residents of Slate Valley Center love him.

For his March 7 appearance, the recreation department at Slate Valley Center led by Andrea Kelley got the residents into the Irish spirit. Many dressed in green with big green top hats.

Paddy played "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and Neil Diamond's "Sweet Caroline" along with other fan favorites.

"Paddy is booked a long time in advance and for a very good reason," Kelley said. "He's more than the great sax playing, he dresses the part. Above all, he is so well-liked and puts on an amazing show for our residents."

Granville Drama Club to perform 'Little Shop of Horrors' April 8-10

On Friday and Saturday, April 8 and 9, at 5 p.m. and Sunday, April 10, at 1 p.m., the Granville High School Drama Club will present the premier of director Todd Houston and musical director Jessica Strout's interpretation of Howard Ashman and Alan Menken's "Little Shop of Horrors."

The plot of this musical is described as dark and comedic. The cast includes a sadistic dentist, an exotic "out-of-this world" plant and a sidewalk ensemble of sassy lassies.

Not only will the production be a mutual directorial premier, it also will be a farewell of sorts.

Adam Andrews (Seymour), Emily Powers (Audrey), Chloe Ackert (The Dentist) and Lees Weaver and Julia Kelley (Sidewalk Sassy Lassies) – all veterans of past Granville dramatic presentations, including "Peter Pan,"

"Into the Woods," "Little Women," "The Sound of Music" and "Beauty and the Beast" will be bidding their farewell to the Granville community in this tour de force.
