Gladys Flynn, 90, loves animals, nice scenery and visiting different countries.

Slate Valley Center residents engage in virtual reality

It was once tested out before, but now with Covid-19 slipping into the past, virtual reality has come to stay at Slate Valley Center on State Route 40 in Granville.

Happening on a monthly basis, residents are starting to enjoy seeing animals and scenery at their fingertips, as well as traveling to exotic places via modern technology.

Mr. Harrison Nugin from Virtu-Well, a traveling therapeutic virtual reality company from Long Beach,

New York, has agreed to come to Slate Valley Center monthly with the newest and latest virtual reality programs for the residents at the 88-bed skilled nursing facility.

"Virtual reality really stimulates the mind of not only seniors but everyone, so this is perfect for us," said recreation director Andrea Kelley. "We are excited to have Harrison come every month, and the residents look forward to this as they ask about it every day."
