

Granville FFA students visit Granville Center

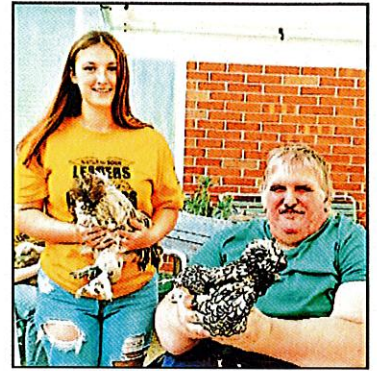

On the morning of Tuesday, June 6, residents at Granville Center, the 122-bed skilled nursing facility on Madison Street, had a great time as they were visited by a number of Granville High School Future Farmers of America students wearing their yellow "Natural Leaders" T-shirts.

The FFA students, who are highly fluent in agricultural studies and belong to the school's program, brought with them farm animals, which delighted the center's residents.

Many of the residents come from a farming background because of their Washington County upbringing, and the animals brought back memories of when they lived and worked on the farm many years ago. They may have been dairy farmers, sheep herders, raised chickens, rode horses or all of the above, and seeing the animals encouraged happy recollections.

"These students knew exactly what sparked our residents, and we at Granville Center are so grateful to them," said recreation director Jennifer Hall. "Many thanks to Mrs. (Deb) Cahan and all of her students for enriching our day."
